The Civic Association presented Mr. Hatch, the outgoing president with a very fine leather traveling bag as a token of their appreciation of the fine service he rendered as head of the Association.

The outgoing secretary, Paul J. Roesener was presented with a pen and pencil set as an appreciation of his excellent secretarial duties.

President Schlacks announced the appointment of the following chairmen of committees for the ensuing year:

Publicity, Wm. Semmler; Membership, A. C. Hatch; Social and entertainment, Elmer L. Cooper; Enterprise and Investigating, Raymond McGuire; Grievance, Chas. B. Elder; Health and Sanitation, Dr. E. G. McMahon.

Historian, Paul J. Roesner.
Treasurer Robert A. Bechstein gave an illuminating and interesting report of the amount of money the Civic Association has paid out for local purposes during the five years of its existence as follows:

Boy and Girl Scouts	$128.68
Inoculations	12.00
Christmas entertainments	149.96
Memorial Day, Citizenship
Day speakers, etc.	202.45
Cannon Pioneer Memorial cemetery and flags	46.12

Garden Club	10.00
Women's Service Club	25.00
School Bicycle rack	25.45
Civilian Defense	82.25
Skating rink	85.00

Total $933.91

The Association members felt a drive should be inaugurated to boost the attendance and it was felt that if eats and refreshments were served at the monthly meetings followed with card games, more interest in the association could be aroused and a better attendance stimulated.

It was voted to dispense with the Association meetings during the months of July and August. The next meeting will be in September.

REV. J. L. HUNTER DIES; WAS BORN IN FRANKFORT

After several weeks of illness Rev. J. Lloyd Hunter passed away June 17th and was laid to rest Saturday at Wheaton, Illinois. He was the second son of the late Daniel G. Hunter who lived seventy-five years on the Hunter Estate three miles east of Frankfort at Harlem Ave., and Lincoln Highway.

Rev. J. Lloyd Hunter was born on that farm 55 years ago. As a lad he attended the Frankfort Methodist Church and Sunday School. One Sunday the late Rev. Duncan McGlashen, also a pioneer of Frankfort, was home on a visit, he preached in that little Methodist church on the text, "I say unto you, Lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest." J. Lloyd Hunter responded to that call and dedicated his life to the service of his Master.

After his education Mr. Hunter became an ordained Baptist minister and one of his first churches was the Ridgewood Baptist church of Joliet. Later Lloyd felt definitely called into Sunday School Evangelistic work in rural sections of the Midwest. He established many Sunday Schools for boys and girls who lived in remote areas where there were no churches of any kind. Most Christian people would be appalled if given the actual numbers of such communities which exist today here in our own land. The motto of Mr. Hunter's life was: "To the otherwise unreached." Under his preaching many boys and girls decided to go to the Moody Bible Institute and other Bible Schools for special training and later became missionaries at home or abroad.

When Rev. Mr. Hunter found that no work of this type was being done in Canada, he left his work in the States to some of his converts and he went across the border to Winnipeg. He found great stretches of territory where boys and girls were growing up with no opportunity to attend any Sunday School or church. He appealed to the churches in the large cities and with their help he worked in one Province after another until Sunday Schools were established from coast to coast. Rev. Mr. Hunter was elected Superintendent of the entire Canadian Sunday School Union. It was a tremendous task and he felt so keenly the huge responsibility that his health became impaired.

Rev. Mr. Hunter died just two months to the day after the death of his mother. She had been a Baptist Missionary and it was from his mother Lloyd Hunter had learned to love his Bible and it was the desire of his life that others would know and love it too.

Roger Strasburg Drops Note To His Mother

By John Alden Senning

The townspeople of New Lenox were thoroughly thrilled early Tuesday afternoon by the flight of a B-25 "Billy Mitchell" bomber over the town. The plane came in exceptionally low and dropped a note which landed directly in front of the Ellis J. O'Daniel Drug Store. The contents of the note revealed the pilot to be Roger Strasburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Strasburg of New Lenox.

It was approximately 1:00 p. m., when the craft came over, noticed only by a few of the most ardent airplane fans. But as it began its second sweep over the town, all but those confined to their beds, turned their eyes skyward. On each succeeding passage above the village, the plane came lower, until it was barely above the tree tops.

It was reported that Roger drew the attention of his father, who is employed at the "Pole Yards" by opening the side window and waving to him as he was at work.

On the final sweep, the plane approached from the north and dropped the message. It read: Dear Mom:

Just flying over. Tell all the folks hello.

Roger. For the family it was one of the greatest thrills they have ever enjoyed. Last Friday they had received word Roger would be home on a furlough, and so had canceled an intended trip to Colorado. They were disappointed to hear later, however, that Roger's leave had been canceled.

The reaction of the townspeople was interesting. Some were frightened; some defiant and outraged; but for most, it was "the thrill that comes once in a lifetime."

TINLEY HOMECOMING STARTS TONIGHT

The Comforts of Home Under the Sea

The USS Cuttlefish, a modern submarine, was built to provide comfortable quarters for its crew as well as to raise havoc with the enemy. Its facilities include a reception room, shower, and radios used solely for amusement. At left, a yeoman keeps records in the sub's office. Those records show that the Cuttlefish has sunk one Jap warship and three Jap merchant ships although it was launched very recently. At center is the crew's quarters, and at right, the cook smiles as he prepares turkey for dinner. The spacious engine room and other compartments of this sub belie the visions of cramped living conditions so often associated with submarines. The Cuttlefish is powered with Diesel engines and has the latest safety developments in its escape hatch.

New Gun Is Sturdy, Accurate and Light

An Allied weapon which is causing all sorts of trouble for the enemy is this sub-machine gun which is small enough to be carried in a briefcase yet so sturdy that 49,000 rounds of test firing improved rather than decreased its accuracy. Corp. Lloyd W. Ricketts is shown in two poses with the gun which is a .45-caliber weapon, weighing less than nine pounds, and has been named the M-3. It is capable of firing 450 rounds per minute and costs less than $20 to produce. Amphibious troops have found that rain, salt, spray, or even complete immersion in sea water has little effect on the reliability of the M-3.

Jap Scores Bullseye but U.S. Fliers Safe

Officers and crewmen of a Liberator B-24 bomber are pictured beside their plane somewhere in the Southwest Pacific shortly after raiding a Japanese base at Gasmata, New Britain. A Jap Zero pilot scored a bullseye through the center of the bomber's marking star but failed to bring the plane down. Four other heavy bombers took part in the raid.

On His Last Leg

Apparently Axis troops are using one-legged men. An American soldier is shown examining an artificial leg which was left on a Tunisian battlefield by some German or Italian soldier who is literally on his last leg. Artificial limbs are a rarity on a battlefield where men are assumed to be in perfect condition.

Helis is a Greek-American who has contributed over $1,000,000 to Greek war relief.

He Made Salt Water Drinkable

"Water, water, everywhere, and not a drop to drink." This cry of the shipwrecked sailor is no longer true. Lieut. Clare R. Spealman, USN (left), has discovered a simple process to make sea water drinkable which can be carried out in a few minutes by a shipwrecked sailor. He is shown being congratulated by Capt. William L. Mann.

"You guys better get out of here while the getting's good." That's what the characters on this imitation leaf told the Japs on Kiska island. The leaves were dropped by U. S. aviators to enemy forces who are supposed to have an aversion for the leaves, supposedly from a Japanese Kin tree.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one until his school grades improve and he learns to take responsibility. Ken's mother tries to protect him from the stern discipline of his father and the youthful bullying of his older brother, Howard, who always manages to do things right. Nell convinces her husband that the colt may be just what Ken needs, in spite of the fact that he has not been promoted. Days pass, and Ken has not chosen his colt. But he is a changed boy.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VI

Ken awakened one morning in the dark and turned to face the window, and when it showed faintly gray outside, he got up and stood watching the dawn brighten in the east.

There wasn't enough light yet for him to see anything clearly. It seemed a world of near-darkness, in which vague outlines appeared and vanished, floating and shadowy. His thoughts were like that, too. He groped for familiar footing in his mind, but everything was changed. Something new had come into him so that he was different. Even Tim said that he had grown an inch since his father promised him the colt, and Howard treated him as if he was important. But something had gone out of him, too; and sometimes he wanted it so that he was in a panic.

But now he was outside. The door was shut. It was windy and dangerous outside—the colt—he began to dress hurriedly. Today or tomorrow he must choose his colt. He would ride up now onto the range and look at the yearlings again.

It was still dark when he stole out the front door and felt the terrace grass under his feet. No one had heard him. That was good. He didn't want Howard along. Going out in the early morning was almost like going into the underwater world, or the world of a picture, or in a dream. Not quite so safe as a dream because he did have to watch his horse, or, if he was climbing on Castle Rock, he had to be careful of his footing, but still nothing like the ordinary world of the daytime.

He walked softly across the Green to the Calf Pasture to get his horse. Ken had been a night wanderer ever since he had learned to walk alone and to climb over the edge of his crib. Nell would wake, hearing a sound in the hall or living room, would find the baby's crib empty and go searching for him.

She'd find him somewhere in the dark, crawling or standing unsteadily on the tail of his nightgown and would pick him up and carry him back to bed.

She tried tying the bottom of his nightgown in a knot with his feet inside, but he merely became more expert at balancing. Then she hobbled him with a soft diaper, but he learned to swing both feet together over the side of his crib, hang with little monkey hands, drop down, and shuffle instead of walk.

When he was older, sometimes he'd go outdoors in the night.

Often Nell did that herself. Restless or unable to sleep, she would slip from her bed, tie a robe around her, take pillow and blanket and go down to her hammock, and lie with her face to the sky, watching the stars.

Ken found Lady just inside the fence of the Calf Pasture, and when he held out his hand and spoke to her, she didn't move away but let him take hold of her halter and lead her out.

He had been riding Lady all week when he was exercising the geldings and looking for Rocket and inspecting the yearlings. He had gone to look at the yearlings every day, and yesterday his mother had ridden out with him. They hadn't been able to find them anywhere, until suddenly, from a high place, they heard the thunder of hoofs.

"They sounded like a regiment," said Nell, telling about it at supper. "And we looked down and saw them, a stream of color flying down the draw. It was beautiful to watch them! They shone in the sun—sorrel and black and bay and roan—the flowing movement—so gay, so free, so frolicsome!"

And then they had ridden down to the yearlings and dismounted amongst them, and Nell exclaimed upon the way their first year of life changed their appearance—dark chestnuts turned to sorrels, a pink roan changed to a blue, blacks lightened to brown, odd spots and markings vanished completely; and conformation altered almost beyond recognition.

"They look stunning," she told Rob. "Smooth and sleek and glossy, their little hides so full and taut they look as if they would burst."

Ken himself had been dazzled by the beauty of them. The rich feeling—one of them his own, but which? He wanted them all, and until he chose, in a way they were all his.

Ken led Lady up the little path through the Gorge, into the corrals, and then into the dark stable, put the catch on her halter, poured a measure of oats in the feed box in the manger before her, and began to groom her. Dad said use saddles—can't see why—better do it anyway—

Lady was a big red roan with a black tail and mane. She moved quickly; her head had a proud, high carriage; her dark eyes were full and intelligent.

Ken slid around her, close to her haunches, one hand on her tail, and then gave her a whack and said, "Get over!"

The mare moved over with her quick strong step and Ken rubbed down her other side. He put on the saddle blanket, then the saddle, and cinched it as tight as he could, remembering the blanket he had lost; lastly the bridle—she had finished her oats. He led her out of the corral and shut the gate. There was a rock there upon which he often stood to mount the tallest horses. He led Lady up to it. First he tried the cinch again. Loose! She always blew herself up when she was being saddled. That was what he had forgotten to do the other day with Cigarette. He took the cinch up three more holes, mounted, and moved off.

The four broncs that Ross was breaking were grazing in the Stable Pasture close by the corrals, and when they saw him, they trotted over to him, and Ken drew rein and stood there, letting them come up and sniff and nicker at Lady; and she nickered back. When he went on they followed for a little while, and then turned back to the corrals—waiting for their oats, he thought. Ross always gave each one a measure of oats before he worked them.

"Might's well keep him going and git it outen his system."

Their names were Gangway, Don, Rumba and Blazes.

Sometimes, Ken thought, as he cantered toward the County Road gate, the names his mother gave the colts in their first summer didn't stick, because the colts changed so. There had been Irish Elegance, so smooth and classy-looking the first summer that Nell said she was naming him after a beautiful, copper-colored California rose. But the second summer he had turned into a little mick, so they dropped the Elegance and just call him Irish.

Ross was having a tough time breaking Gangway, a big blood bay out of Taggart, the tallest and handsomest of the four. Yesterday Ken and Howard had sat on the corral fence watching Ross working with him. Gangway was bucking, and Ross had called to Howard to open the corral gate and let him out. The horse bucked out the gate with him, and Ross swung his quirt, and spurred him, and Gangway sun-fished and cork-screwed and jack-knifed. Ross sat with a little grin and his quirt going all the time, and when he came past Ken, exploding in great grass-hopper leaps, he said, "Might's well keep him goin and git it outen his system."

When it was over and he had ridden Gangway back into the corral and dismounted, Ross went over to the fence and stood hanging on to it, vomiting.

Ken had to dismount to open the gate to the County Road. He was careful to hold the rein tight as he led Lady through and closed the gate behind him. He found another rock to mount by and started up, the Saddle Back.

All the clouds had turned pink, and behind them the sky was a far-away, fiery blue.

The higher he climbed the wider the sky was, and the farther stretched the fleet of tattered clouds. They were getting more color every minute, some of them blazed crimson. All the stars had disappeared except one, which shone between two clouds, bright gold.

Lady wanted her head.

There was a strong current of sympathy between the boy and the mare. When he wanted to stop and look around she understood perfectly and stood with ears pricked and head turning, absorbed in contemplation just as he was. And at exactly the moment when he had had enough, she knew it, and would move forward without the signal.

Today she was excited by the color and the electric quality of the air and the feeling of movement in the grass and the sky, and she kept asking for a free rein. When Ken gave it to her, she stretched out her nose and went up the steepest part of the Saddle Back at a gallop.

Ken looked for the yearlings where they had been yesterday but there was no sign of them. He rode around for an hour, thinking that Shorty would have taken him right to them, but Lady didn't have that much sense, she was just excited and wanting to run in any direction. All the sunrise colors had gone now, and the torn shreds of clouds were purple and gray and stormy looking.

Ken rode up to the highest peak of the Saddle Back so that he could look all around for dozens of miles; but the range was empty; not a head of stock anywhere. Still, he knew they could be hidden in the folds of the hills and never show an ear—but which fold? Which hill?

He rode on, and suddenly, coming around a curve, he saw Banner standing out in front of the brood mares, intent and alert, gathered for action.

Ken had barely time to turn his head when he saw Rocket and a sorrel filly cantering toward the bunch, and then he saw Banner trot out to meet them with lowered head and an expression of irresistible intention in his whole body.

Rocket and the young sorrel halted together. Rocket whinnied. Banner screamed. His head snaked along the grass. He reached them and circled around them both. Rocket began to gallop away. Banner pursued, first on one side of her then on the other. The sorrel colt clung close to its mother's side, whinnying nervously. She got in Banner's way. He gave a vicious, snarling neigh, plunged at the little one and bit it in the ribs. It screamed and fled, Banner pursuing.

Lady was taut and trembling with excitement, as Ken was himself. The brood mares, too, were motionless, watching the chase.

The filly showed Banner a clean pair of heels. How she could run!

Rocket trotted nervously up and down near the brood mares. The filly made a big circle, with Banner thundering after her. She came back to the mares, and as she passed them Banner swerved and went for Rocket. The filly fled past Ken. He saw frightened eyes in a tangle of streaming hair and slim legs, and a pang went through him. For a fraction of a second she had looked at him, and it was like an appeal. He wheeled his mount and followed her, turning in the saddle to look back at Rocket.

Rocket was cantering away again with Banner close beside her and before the curve of a hill shut them from view. Ken saw her come to a stop, and the great body of the stallion rear over her. For a moment the two of them, twisted into one shape, were sculptured against the stormy sky.

When Ken turned and looked again for the filly she was nowhere in sight. He pulled Lady up short. The range was empty, with no movement but the clouds and the grass, and no sound but the panting of the mare he rode and the thud of his own heart beating.

Rocket's colt—a yearling, a filly—and his own. He hadn't had to choose one after all. She had just come to him. His own because of that second cry for help that had come from her eyes to his; his own because of her wild beauty and speed, his own because his heart burned within him at the sight and thought of her; his own because—well, just his own.

Then, from far ahead of him came an excited whinny—another and another. The filly appeared from nowhere, a tiny shape, running on a ridge in front of him, tail streaming against the dark tattered clouds; she plunged over the ridge, he heard more whinnies, he kicked Lady in the ribs and gave her her head, and in a few moments stood on the ridge, looking down, and saw the beautiful filly rejoining the band of yearlings, who welcomed her with excited chattering as school-children welcome each other at reunion in the fall.

Ken rode down the mountain in a daze of happiness. No dream he had ever had, no imagination of adventure or triumph could touch this moment. He felt as if he had burst out of his old self and was something entirely new—and that the world had burst into something new too. So this was it—this was what being alive meant—Oh, my filly, my filly, my beautiful!

"For once you're back to breakfast on time," said Rob, as Ken took his seat at the table.

Ever since she had read in the Government bulletins that all prize stock was raised on elaborate formulas of mixed grains—or ground oats—and had noticed that the dogs, when they were hungry, squirmed through the wire fence into the calves' corral and ate the ground oats from the feed boxes, oatmeal had a place on her breakfast table.

JOHN'S COUNSEL TO CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—II John 4-11; III John 5-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Benedict, I pray that in all things thou mayest prosper and be in health; even as thy soul prospereth.—III John 2.

Christians need guidance, especially in their home and church relationships. The apostle John, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, wrote the two personal letters known to us as II and III John. They abound in sound spiritual, practical advice. Note that these two words belong together, for what is truly spiritual cannot help but be tremendously practical and perfect for the direction of thought and life.

In these letters five admirable lessons are taught. Let us give heed to them. They are appropriate to our day.

I. Set an Example Before Your Children (II John 4-6).

We may not like to admit it, but our children are largely what we make them by their training—or lack of it—in the home. Parents have the grave and at the same time precious responsibility of being what they want their children to be. We set the mold of their thinking and acting, not only about material things, but mentally and spiritually, which is far more important.

Above all we must teach them by precept and example to love God supremely, and to walk after His commandments. Father, mother, have you done your duty? Are your children "walking in truth" (v. 4)?

II. Be on Guard Against False Teachers (II John 7-11).

We are not to countenance false teaching even by entertaining such teachers, or having close fellowship with them. To create the impression before the world and the Church that they are "not so bad," by appearing as their friends, is to partake of their evil works (v. 11). This is a serious matter, and one which is a problem in the Church today.

Such teachers may easily be recognized. They are aptly described by Dr. Douglass: "In all ages the Church has been plagued by those who want to substitute something for pure Christian faith, or to embroider it with bright ideas of their own conceiving. Such people may try to strip religion of its supernatural aspect and reduce it to a merely rationalistic system. They may seek to stily loosen the moral standards of the Church because their own lives are deficient when measured by such standards. They may try to minimize the teaching of the cross because it stands for sacrifice." Watch against them, and stand against their destructive teaching.

III. Be Diligent in Putting Forward True Teachers (III John 5-8).

The door which should be closed against false teachers should be opened wide to those who are faithful teachers of the truth. This refers primarily to the hospitality of the home, and reminds us of a grace which has been all but forgotten in these days of small apartments.

Whether we are able to open our homes to God's servants or not, we can show a Christian spirit of genuine hospitality in helping to bring them forward (v. 6) in their work. This may be done by gifts of money, by kindness shown in time of need, by a real interest in their work, by recommending them to others who wish to hear the truth.

Do everything possible, then, to hinder the false teacher, and be just as diligent to put forward the ministry of the true man of God.

IV. Do Not Trust Proud, Self-Seeking Leadership (III John 9-11).

A man may be orthodox, and intensely loyal to the denomination, and at the same time be a wicked man whose example is to be shunned. No word is said against the teaching of Diotrephes. He was not condemned for being careless about the affairs of the church, or unfaithful in his attendance and devotion to its interest as he saw them. The sin of Diotrephes was pride, a desire to be the boss of the church, "No. 1 man" in its affairs. Lacking true spirituality which always results in humility, he opposed the apostle. Not only did he refuse to receive him, but used pressure on others who were willing to be hospitable.

V. Emulate the Life of the Man of Good Report (III John 12).

A good man! No words of praise could possibly surpass such a testimony. The world is full of brilliant, skilled, wealthy and prominent people, but there is an appalling dearth of good men and women.

How refreshing to meet, and how delightful to know, such a man—such a woman. Like Demetrius, they have not only the witness of the Church, and of the truth, but also of "all men." But last week we said the world hates real Christians. It does, but it also respects them, and is forced to bear witness to their reality and goodness.

Professed fellowship with God in Christ which does not result in goodness of life may well be scrutinized.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

From 1907 to 1912, guayule rubber from Mexico represented about 7 per cent of the world's rubber supply. In 1941, it was less than 1 per cent.

More than 86,000,000 motor vehicles have been produced in the United States since 1900, with an average of five tires per vehicle. That gives you an idea of the number of tires that have been made to maintain motor transportation!

A Spanish historian back in 1519 described a ball made of the gum of a tree that grows in "hot countries." He was referring to what we now call rubber.

Corporal Harry E. Anderson, 24 year-old hero son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Anderson of New Lenox has received the posthumous award of the Purple Heart for military merit and for wounds in action which resulted in his death on December 11, 1941.

The father was notified of the award made by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, through Col. John Dixon, Marine Corp officer, in Washington, D. C.

Corporal Anderson was a Marine Corp Operator stationed on the Island of Guam where he had been for eight months before the Jap attack came. Several times he had talked by radio with his parents.

It is believed that Corporal Anderson was apparently hit by bomb fragments as hostilities opened. The family has heard from a Navy Nurse how he lived for four days in a coma and how blood transfusions failed to rally him.

Colonel Dixon notified the father that his son had earned the American Defense Service Medal with base clasp for service on Guam during an emergency and the Asiatic-Pacific campaign medal for service there.

Corporal Anderson would have been in the Marines four years next August.

Mrs. Victor E. Moore presented her Harvey piano pupils in recital at the First Methodist Church in Harvey, Illinois, Saturday evening. About twenty participated in the program, many others having left the city for vacations. An interesting feature of the recital was the duo work done by Mrs. Moore and her sister, Mrs. Roy Newton of Big Rapids, Michigan, an accomplished musician. Mrs. Newton plays annually on Mrs. Moore's recitals. The numbers played on two pianos were Weber's Perpetual Motion, Tea for Two, and a modern group consisting of Three Blind Mice, Rumblero of Morton Gould and Turkey in the Straw. They also played an organ and piano group: Reverie by Debussy, and Adoration by Morowski with Mrs. Moore at the organ.

Other New Lenox people who attended the recital in Harvey were Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Boynton and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Chester Bowman.

Mrs. Moore plans a studio recital for her New Lenox pupils sometime in the near future. Besides teaching in Harvey and New Lenox, Mrs. Moore has a studio in Fowler's Music store in Joliet.

THRIFT

Makes America
Strong

Never in the history of our nation has thrift been so vital to the welfare of our country. Only the dollars you save can forge the sinews of war that threaten our shores from the East and from the West. Save anywhere—save here if you like—but SAVE. America can't win this fight without your help.

Why I'm looking younger every day

The secret of my youthful looks and perfect condition? Why, I owe it all to my owner for giving me special wartime care.

She certainly has the right idea. She knows that if she treats me right I'll go on safeguarding the family's food and health for a long, long time.

Yep, she's a bright little woman . . . and you'd be, too, if you'd give your electric refrigerator this wartime care. It's really very simple. Here, I'll show you what to do.

Give it air—Be sure your refrigerator is placed an inch or more away from the wall, so that there will be free circulation about the cabinet. If the refrigerator is in a small room, leave the door of the room open.

Don't crowd food or beverage bottles against the freezing unit. This interferes with the free circulation of cold air inside the cabinet, and thus prevents the refrigerator from operating at its maximum efficiency.

Lady, please! Never use anything sharp to remove cube trays. And before putting them back be sure to dry the bottom of the trays. This will help keep the trays from freezing to the compartment.

Close the door! When the door of your refrigerator is open, frost forms on the freezing unit more rapidly. And that means you must defrost more often. So keep the door closed as much as possible.

Time to defrost—When the frost becomes 1/4-inch thick, defrost the freezing unit; otherwise your refrigerator will run too often. Two hints: don't put hot water in the trays to speed defrosting; don't forget to empty the drip water after defrosting.

Saturday bath—Give your refrigerator a wash every time you defrost, using water with baking soda. After washing and drying, dust the rubber insulation around the door with talcum powder.

What about the motor?—There are many types of refrigerating mechanisms, and each requires a different kind of care. Consult the manufacturer's instructions for your refrigerator and see what attention it needs. If you are uncertain, see your serviceman.

Play safe! Don't trust the life of your refrigerator to a handyman. If it should get out of adjustment or become noisy, call an expert service man to make a check-up on the mechanism. In the long run you'll save money and spare yourself extra trouble.

Electricity has gone to war—don't waste it!

WOMEN'S SERVICE CLUB NEWS

By Mrs. Leslie Clark
Sgt. Edward Hentsch is home enjoying a 15 day furlough.

Pvt. Robert Benson has been transferred and is now stationed at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Pvt. Arthur Hurley has also been transferred and is attending school at The Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

The following V mail letter was received from one of our boys in England:

Dear Friends:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the beautiful birthday card and the gift which I received the other day. I can truthfully say that one doesn't find many Service Clubs who are as thoughtful of the Service Men as the Service Club at Mokena. It is greatly appreciated by everyone in Service to know that the folks back home are thinking about them.

I am now in England and I find this to be a country of great beauty. We are settled down in a very nice camp and we have nothing to complain about.

I have noticed in the News-Bulletin that Lt. Oliver Lauffer is also over here. It might be such a thing that we will be able to meet one another.

I am receiving the News-Bulletin again which for sometime it seems it just couldn't catch up with me.

I have received all of the back numbers and find the news very interesting even though it is five and six weeks old.

In closing I once more want to express my thanks and here's a "Hello" to the best little community in the Middle West.

Respectfully yours,
WILBUR W. MANCKE

Our first contribution will be for Friday, July 9th and all members are asked to have the cookies or cake delivered to Mrs. Needham's residence not later than four o'clock in the afternoon so that they may be delivered to Joliet on the 4:35 train. If it is not at all possible for you to bring them in, please call 2861 and arrangements will be made to pick them up.

The address of Dean Rueckert who recently entered the service is: Pvt. Dean Rueckert, ASN 36749-427, 304th Tg. Bde. No. 3 Sgdn. 13, Brk. 589, Sheppard Field, Texas.

Sunday Mrs. E. A. Sjostedt entertained dinner guests from Chicago in the home of her father, Herman Schweser. The guests were: Mrs. Sigrid Sjostedt, Mrs. Frances Swanson and Johnnie, Chas. Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. G. Forsman, Mr. and Mrs. E. Braeger, Mr. and Mrs. O. Gustafson, Mrs. J. A. Schneller, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Lauritzen.

Following are some interesting parts of recent letters received by Mrs. E. A. Sjostedt from her husband who is one of Uncle Sam's Navy Seabees working in the Southwest Pacific:

"...we are now on a 'safe' island, back in the tropics, so don't worry about me. We work hard every day and the heat just about takes all the starch out of us. However, it cools off pretty well at night. Of course, the best part of it all is that we have no Japs to contend with here and that really is something. When we go to bed here we know we won't be getting up in the middle of the night for old Washing Machine Charlie. Things were pretty tough on Guadalcanal all right. The very first day as part of us landed, we were out in the bay in a Higgins boat when the air raid warning flag was raised on the beach. We stayed out there as we couldn't land during an air raid. I looked up and counted (here the censor got in his lick) over us. We were all plenty scared but being out in the bay was the safest place. We heard the bombs drop on the island and saw the dust and the flashes. What an experience! We slept in foxholes some nights, but that was while we were being shelled by ships at sea. Those shells can keep up for hours. The Japs usually got out of there before day-break because our planes would catch them at sea. Yes, we all consider ourselves lucky to have gone through Guadalcanal and got off OK."

"...you asked about the island we are on now. We are located about a mile outside the heart of a village. It isn't a city here; it is just a small town. The houses are kind of nice; some are stucco, while others are frame with fancy wood-work on them. They are all enclosed and not on stilts as there is no water under them. As for the people there are plenty whites while the natives are coal black and homely and filthy. There are quite a few Tonkinese (spelling doubtful) around. They look like dark Chinese. Only one place have we seen Polynesians. Can't mention where, but it wasn't the Solomons. The Solomons have real blacks, too. The natives of New Zealand are Polynesians though, but are called Maoris and they look something like Hawaiians. These natives here and in the Solomons are real black and homely with plenty of dirt, crooked feet, and lots of tropic ulcers. Yesterday I rode around on a truck through the settlement. It is a quaint little town, but I surely could never get used to living down here."

"...we have movies here every night but that's too much for me; I don't care to see them that often. Artie Shaw's band is expected to come soon, courtesy of the USO. The mosquitoes are really bad. I wish they could ration them. Wonder what they ate before we got here."

"...I have plenty of reading matter as I get Reader's Digest, the Tribune, Herald-American, and the Mokena News-Bulletin and I read them all thoroughly, as do the other guys. There isn't anything I need right now except a trip back home. We are all plenty homesick and are hoping we'll get home before the year is out."

ORLAND PARK

The Orland unit of Home Bureau held their June meeting Monday the 21st at the home of Mrs. Wakeland. Seven members and three guests were present. Mrs. Geo. Gee Jr., Mrs. Robert Uthe and Mrs. Lawrence Doctor joined the group at this meeting. We now have 20 members and hope to increase this number every month. The major lesson on Time Management was presented by our Home Advisor Mrs. Cornelius. It was indeed an interesting lesson. Mrs. Cornelius told us how to have a time schedule in planning our work thereby eliminating worry, hurry and fatigue. Home accident report sheets were given us and on these we are to keep record of any accident in the home from July 1 thru December 1.

We should try and prevent as many accidents at this time because of the shortage of doctors.

There will be two special awards given during farm and home week, one to the county and one to the individual reporting the least accidents. Our next meeting will be held July 6 at 1:45 pm. at the home of Mrs. Ernest Sayer on 108 Ave., 1 mile south of 143rd street. Please try to attend.

Publicity chairman Mrs. Herman Gee Bonnie Carol, granddaughter or Mr. and Mrs. George Uthe arrived in Virginia with her mother, to see her father Cpl. Elmer Uthe on Father's Day.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear Dad and husband who left us June 24, 1940:

We miss you from our home dear Daddy,

We miss you from your place, a shadow o'er our life is cast, We miss the sunshine of your face.

We miss your kind and loving hand Your fond and earnest care.

Our home is dark without you, We miss you everywhere.

MARTIN, EUGENE and Van EARL

Miss Ruby Clark of the State Department for Vocational Education, Springfield, has gone over all of the plans for the Home Economics unit to be installed in the restaurant building and was highly pleased. She expressed the idea that the school would encounter no difficulty in securing approval of the department after it has been in operation for the usual one year of probation. Miss Clark expressed the hope that the unit would be utilized by the community for adult classes, and related the fact that the Federal Government will reimburse up to one hundred per cent on courses of this nature.

Don't forget the Card, bunco and auction party which will be given in the school gym Friday, June 25 at 8 pm. This is the first affair in a series of parties and entertainments which are being sponsored by the Orland Community Committee to help raise funds to establish the new Home Economics department in the Orland Park school. Watch for announcements of succeeding events and try to attend as many as possible because by so doing you will not only have worthwhile diversion, and entertainment but will help materially in establishing the new unit which will be an asset to the community.

Eleanor and James Benton are home from a visit in Texas. While there, they visited at Camp Wolters where they saw Sherman Knox Jr. and the three of them had dinner at the Crazy Crystal Hotel in Mineral Wells the next day. They report that Sherman has entirely recovered from his long illness and has grown in height and breadth and looks every inch the soldier. He is now in the QMC Detachment at the Camp and is learning to be a cook.

The Annual Summer dance of the Orland Park Post of the American Legion held at Goodings Grove last Saturday night was well attended and reports are that everybody spent a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

Several cases of whooping cough are reported in the village of Orland Park. The Orland Community Health Committee is urging parents to isolate children with coughs and colds for a period of two weeks in order to prevent the spread of this dangerous children's disease. This disease is very infectious, and children raving it may spread the disease over the whole community if allowed to play or associate with other children who are not immune. The characteristic cough or "whoop" usually develops in about 2 weeks and spasms of coughing often and with vomiting. Non-immune children develop the disease within 10 days from late of exposure. Whooping cough is particularly infectious during the 1st and 2nd weeks. It is possible for your physician to administer serum to lessen the severity of the disease. For babies and very young children, it is common practice to give 3 protective doses of whooping cough vaccine but immunity is not established immediately.

If parents of children having the disease will prevent their children from playing or associating with other children during the period of infection, it will go a long way to prevent the spread of the disease in the community.

ARMY officers have been criticized more than a mere trifle for inability to "understand the need of hard, competitive sport."

This isn't true of the large majority of army officers. They have had nothing to say about it.

The decision was made by a small leading group, and the army in general has disliked the ruling as much as anyone else.

This applies especially to football in various colleges which the army has taken over.

Colleges under navy control will be able to play any student who cares to play, who is up in his work and who has the time.

If West Point and Annapolis, who have a 16 hours per day schedule, can find time for intercollegiate competition, there is certainly no reason why the colleges can't.

Football's Problem

Several colleges will be starting summer practice soon. But football's main problem will be in facing the army edict that prevents any budding soldier from taking part in intercollegiate sport.

Those colleges that have drawn army students will either have to give up football completely or else depend upon the few available men left.

They will be badly outclassed by the navy school. We understand there is an effort under way to drag the navy over to the army's side of the argument.

As the navy has the stronger side of the case, this would be a bad mistake.

Racing's Splurge

A number of noncombatants can't understand why racing has come in for such a boom and why so much money is bet at various tracks.

This is simple enough. As a starter there is something like 12 billion extra dollars loose around the map, with many spending outlets under a blockade.

For one example, you see few people buying cars today.

In the second instance, there is a greater demand for quick action on the side of thrills, which to many only a bet can satisfy.

Belmont is sure to end its summer season with the highest average ever sent through track mutuels, well beyond the million dollar mark.

Even with the big crowds that once traveled to Santa Anita, a $700,000 daily average was considered on the high side.

You can understand how strong the fever gets to be when so many thousands are willing to walk so far in order to buck 11 or 12 per cent.

Bing Crosby's Winner

And speaking of racing, a well-worn radio gag has been wrecked and dismantled.

It rests today in ruins. It all happened at Belmont park recently when Bing Crosby's Argentine horse, Don Bingo, came spinning along to the front.

Don Bingo made it two in a row. Not only that, but he ran away from strong fields, coasting into the wire.

This ends all that talk about Crosby's stable. I happened to be with Bing when Don Bingo won his last start.

As his Argentine entry came sweeping to the front, Bing began calling:

"Where is Bob Hope? Will someone please page Bob Hope?"

Armstrong and Angott

There is still a healthy doubt around the landscape as to whether even the windmill or whirlwind style of Henry Armstrong can force Sammy Angott away from his wrestling holds.

Sammy remains the Human Python, a hard man to beat, but a harder man to watch.

It may be that Armstrong's method of tearing in will finally leave Angott in an untangled situation, where he will do his own share of punching.

But he will have to prove that to quite a chunk of his fellow citizens before they will believe it.

Still, it would be no thick surprise to see Armstrong return to his old spot on top of the lightweight heap before the scramble is over, not forgetting Montgomery and Beau Jack.

SPORTLIGHT BRIEFS:

Before joining the Yankees in 1921, Ed Barrow had served as president of two minor leagues and manager of seven clubs.

Joe McCarthy says Ewald Pyle, Washington left-hander, is the best pitching recruit of the American league this season.

Bill McGowan is the oldest umpire in the major leagues in point of service. This is his 19th season.

Connie Mack caught his last game for Pittsburgh in 1896. In his 664-game career he had 842 assists.

QUITE a few baseball enthusiasts question the activities of the Philadelphia Phillies in trading Danny Litwhiler and Earl Naylor to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Baseball in Philadelphia was at its highest ebb in many years when Bill Cox, president of the Phillies, announced the transaction which brought Cardinal outfielders Coaker Triplett, Buster Adams and Dain Clay to the City of Brotherly Love.

The question of which team got the better of the trade seems to be of secondary importance. There is another factor which, in the judgment of many, makes the Phils guilty of an error in timing.

Philadelphia Story

That factor concerns Philadelphia fans. Those long-suffering individuals, accustomed to last-place standing and to predictions that "prospects of moving up are not too good," finally were being convinced that President Cox and Manager Bucky Harris were men who wouldn't dispose of a star player for half interest in the Fort Knox gold vaults.

Bill Cox entered baseball business late last winter when he invested a large pile of money in the Phillies. Prior to the advent of Cox, Gerry Nugent was head man. Nugent would dispose of baseball players as fast as venders could sell hot dogs in the bleachers.

Cox had sold the cash customers on his new policy. No longer would valuable players be sold down the river. The manner in which the fans responded was little short of pathetic. They had seen the Phils win a few ball games and they were happy. It was once remarked that a Phil winning streak consisted of splitting a double header. Now the club was winning its share of battles.

Litwhiler probably was the best all-around player on the team. He was popular—one of the favored few, along with Babe Dahlgren, Schoolboy Rowe and Johnny Kraus. Perhaps he wasn't quite as good as he was a couple of years ago when he was having a great season, but he still packed plenty of guns.

Miracles Unusual

Granted that the Phils have been slipping a little. Quite possibly the customers expected that. Miracles are unusual this season. But the future looked considerably brighter with a man at the helm determined to hang onto his good players and anxious to acquire more.

It undoubtedly came as quite a blow when Cox sent one of the favorite players on his way. He had run ads thanking the fans for their patronage, and then, oddly enough, turned around and made a move to kill the good will which he had built.

There are two sides to the story, of course. Cox and Harris had their reasons for desiring the swap. Cox expressed little anxiety about fan reaction.

"All three of the new Phillies are speedsters and my first promise in taking over the Phils was that the only thing about baseball of which I was certain was that speed was essential to success. The deal has been completed with that appraisal of baseball success in mind.

"... Sending Litwhiler to the world champions is no insult to Danny, who has played hard for us this season and is a competitor we hate to lose. Naylor, while he has not played so much as Litwhiler, has shown a splendid attitude."

About Harris

At the season's end, Manager Harris will deserve much of the credit—or blame—for the Phils' final standing. He doesn't talk a great deal, but he has his say in settling every deal made by the club. He alone of the organization knows the value of men up for sale or trade.

He put thumbs down on the proposition when the Yankees tried to get rid of Rollie Hemsley and Bill Knickerbocker in the Nick Etten deal. He insisted on Rowe in the deal of strong opposition.

It was Bucky who originated the idea of making Dahlgren over for shortstop duty. Most baseball critics chuckled at Dahlgren's unusual style of handling grounders, which was strictly unorthodox, to put it kindly. But Dahlgren stayed at short and made the grade.

Earl Whitehill, a smart pitching coach, was engaged by Harris. Whitehill taught Jack Kraus to break his curve ball at the waist instead of the shoulder. And Kraus repaid that effort tenfold.

The Future

In an early-spring summary of National league clubs, one writer had this to say: "Phillies lack pitching, catching, fielding, hitting, everything. Only first class major league ball player on team is Danny Litwhiler."

Even though Litwhiler is gone, it is unlikely that the Phils will go to pieces. They are handled by one of the soundest, most underrated managers in baseball. If anyone can hold the club together, Bucky Harris is the man for the job.

Washington, D. C.

CHURCHILL'S TIP

One significant phase of Winston Churchill's conversations here has just leaked out. He volunteered some valuable advice on the makeup of the U. S. delegation to the peace conference.

Talking to a closed-door session of the senate and house foreign relations committees, he was reminded that if Woodrow Wilson had given more thought to the makeup of the U. S. delegation, his efforts to enroll the United States in a League of Nations might not have been such a failure.

Churchill at first tactfully sidestepped comment, explaining he didn't want to stick his nose in American affairs. However, he finally observed with a grin that he knew a little about politics himself and probably could offer one suggestion. "What is it?" chorused several of the politicians.

"Appoint a delegation that is strictly bi-partisan," Churchill replied, "half Democrat and half Republican."

If the President named such a commission of outstanding leaders of both parties, the prime minister added, his chances of winning congressional approval of a treaty among the Allied powers would be greatly enhanced.

LEARNING JAP LANGUAGE

Officer Candidate schools have a reputation for being tough, but the Naval Intelligence Japanese Language school at Boulder, Colo., sets a new record. Hand-picked candidates from colleges and graduate schools pore over Japanese "Kanji" (word pictures) 16 hours a day, 6 days a week, for 14 months.

These 800 students are given intimate high pressure instruction in classes of only five men each. The faculty consists of 150 Japanese-Americans, former professional and business men, recruited from the East and West coast Japanese colonies.

The course is intensive, and the students are given no job except the principal one of learning the difficult Japanese language. Unlike other officer candidates, they have no guard duty, KP, or night bivouacs. Their job is to learn Japanese, learn it quickly, and learn it well.

SENATOR GLASS

Much-loved 85-year-old Senator Carter Glass of Virginia is expected by friends to drop out of the senate before many months. He has served as Woodrow Wilson's secretary of the treasury, 23 faithful years in the senate and 17 years in the house.

Virginia politics close to Governor Darden are passing out the tip that when Glass retires, Darden will appoint as the senator's successor, not 55-year-old Congressman Cliff Woodrum, the most outstanding congressman from Virginia, but 73-year-old Congressman Tom Burch.

WHO OWNS THE FARMS?

Most people have the idea that Washington postwar planners are thinking only of the people in foreign countries. But that isn't the case. They are also thinking of how the land of America can be returned to the people of America.

Real fact is that much of the big land holdings in the U. S. A. are in the hands of insurance companies and absentee landlords, as strikingly brought out by latest AAA conservation and parity payments.

In four of the country's biggest farming states, largest payments were made not to individual farmers but to life insurance companies. Here are the actual payments, each one being the highest payment in that state:

Ohio—Union Central Life Insurance company, Cincinnati, $49,153; Wisconsin—Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, Milwaukee, $47,517; Iowa—Equitable Life Insurance company, Des Moines, $33,418; Missouri—General American Life Insurance company, St. Louis, $52,170.

In Mississippi, the largest payment went to an absentee landlord, the British owners of Delta and Pine Land company, Scott, Miss. The property is managed by a former AAA official, Oscar Johnston. The payment was $50,141.

Highest payment in Illinois went to the First Trust Joint Stock Land bank, Chicago, $29,152. Highest in Nebraska went to the Federal Land Bank of Omaha, $77,605, while the same thing was true in Minnesota, where the largest payment, $75,761, went to the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul. The land banks hold a lot of property as a result of mortgage foreclosures in the lean years.

Largest payments in the four largest agricultural states of the northeast also went to insurance companies.

New York—Metropolitan Life Insurance company, New York city, $101,863. Incidentally, this was the largest payment made in the entire country. Connecticut—Connecticut General Life Insurance company, Hartford, $48,437. Pennsylvania—Providence Mutual Life Insurance company, Philadelphia, $13,022. New Jersey—Mutual Benefit Life Insurance company of Newark, received payment of $32,126.

Fight the Forgery Racket!

By FRANK J. WILSON
Chief, United States Secret Service

WHENEVER you pay out your good money for any government check, remember one thing:

Have the check initialed by the employee who pays out the money for it.

This will help you to place responsibility if the endorsement on the check should be declared a forgery. Also, it will be of much help when an investigation is conducted in an effort to arrest the check forger.

There is another pointer which is closely associated with this one. Here it is:

Try to write on the back of the check a brief description of the person who presents it, if that person is a stranger. For instance, you might write "WM—50—5'9"—heavy" meaning "White man about 50 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, of heavy build."

This will take only a few seconds and may be the means of tracing a forger and recovering your loss, if the check proves to be a forged endorsement.

Battleship a Menagerie

For over a century, seamen on British war vessels were permitted to own pets, with little restriction on their number and size, says Collier's. The practice was banned a few years ago, when the admiralty learned that one battleship carried an assortment of 1,560 animals, which included large snakes, bears, deer and antelopes.

When you hear a Marine called a "Leatherneck," it has nothing to do with the epidermis of his neck. Years ago the Marine uniform was equipped with a high stiff leather collar. From that time on, "Leatherneck" has been the word for a Marine. The word for his favorite cigarette is "Camel"—the favorite cigarette also of men in the Army, Navy, and Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U.
